

Thank you for the permission

I would like to congratulate the gains achieved within the scope of cooperation to achieve a mine-free world, share Mozambique's experience, highlight that thanks to the support of international cooperation the country declared mine-free

In the scope of assistance, the country has a coordination mechanism, the National Social Action Council, which has been fundamental in sharing updated information on sectoral activities and financial resources available in the actions developed. It is important to continue with cooperation efforts so that actions are effective in assisting mine victims.

This mechanism is made up of government institutions, civil society, the private sector as well as cooperation partners who have provided technical and financial assistance in different programs, and it is also necessary to improve the planning process so that it is more inclusive and technical approaches concerning removal of barriers that still affect people with disabilities and victims of mines.

However, it is important to highlight the need to continue making efforts so that support continues to strengthen our actions and thus provide better assistance to victims.
